

Month in Review – History Center – February 2010

Photograph restoration project

- The Avalon History Center is undertaking a project to restore many photos within the collection. Photos will be high resolution, glossy, and 10 x 13 in composition, some will be included at a larger size. When completed many of the finished works will be placed on display in suitable frames. In the near future this project will put a brand new face on each and every gallery within the Center. This project is made possible by the Diller family Grant with the work being done by Tom Dawson's Avalon Promo.

Sample picture of frames to be used

Brochure highlighting the History Center completed

- A brochure has been completed highlighting all aspects of the Avalon History Center. Once the finished copies are delivered they will be distributed to local chamber and tourism boards, regional museums, and regional libraries.

Above. Images of the completed brochure.

Phillyburbs.com to feature Avalon and the History Center prominently

- Center curator Mr. Joseph Angemi has worked with a representative from Phillyburbs.com for an upcoming spring issue highlighting Avalon's place in yesterday and today. The piece will run a biographical history sketch and accompanying images courtesy of the Avalon History Center.

Website adds more content

- Over the past month the History Center's website has added a variety of photos of exhibits, historical photography, and objects within the collection. In the coming months more will be added to make the website experience an exciting one.

Cataloging of collection

- Museum Technician, Rebecca Leopold, has continued to process and catalog the History Center collection. As the collection comes closer to being completed plans will be made to improve the housing of collections, making the AAM compliant.